"The proper conclusion seems to be that, however much we may desire to believe that insurance is interstate commerce and therefore susceptible of federal supervision, the matter is concluded by the carefully considered judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States, against which, despite frequent assaults by its ablest opponents during a period of nearly forty years, not a single dissenting voice has been raised from the bench. Any act of Congress, with a view to such supervision, would necessarily be unconstitutional and void, and the time and money that would be required to secure its passage could much more profitably be expended in endeavoring to secure some uniform action on the parts of the states based upon a more intelligent understanding of the business and of the real interests of the insuring public."

"Es ist angesichts eines Gesetzes von solch grosser volkswirtschaftlicher Bedeutung nicht zu verwundern, dass binnen Jahresfrist nicht weniger als elf Kommentare (Alexander-Katz, Deybeck, von Knebel-Döberitz, Könige, Manes, Müller-Prager, Naundorff, Neumann, Randow [Elsners Assekuranz-Almanach 1902], Rehm und Zehnter) veröffentlicht worden sind. Dagegen fehlt es bis jetzt an einer grösseren zusammenhängenden Darstellung des neuen Rechtszustandes. Diese Lücke soll die vorliegende Arbeit ausfüllen. Sie soll jeden, der sich mit dem öffentlichen Versicherungsrecht befasst, den Studierenden sowohl wie den in der Praxis des Versicherungswesens Stehenden, den Richter und Rechtsanwalt mit den seit dem 1. Januar 1902 geltenden Vorschriften über die Beaufsichtigung der privaten Versicherungsunternehmungen vertraut machen." Vorwort.
